

Success Story

Haley's confidence in her abilities was very low when she started vision therapy. She had information in her mind but was unable to transfer it onto paper. Copying, test taking, writing on a line, and putting numbers in correct columns were time consuming and frustrating. We both found ourselves in tears during the struggle of completing homework.

I am thrilled that Haley is now working at her potential. Copying information is no longer a frustration but a normal part of school.

Her confidence is high and she knows that she can accomplish anything she chooses to.

Thanks for all your work!
